Rivercrossing Heather H. Yeung

CROSSINGPLACE

The sea is no-one's skin.

The sailor, bred in a tannery, addicted to the repulsion of water and salt and air, sails. The verb determines the effort: sail as close to sea-skin as we get, hull (so goes the old riddle) plough, net riddle, and enginegrease an attempted transformation or rainbow from which slick grey masks a venture in which there is no landscape to impugn.

Burnt pinepitch and oil soils pages, blooms futures. The old poet's claim for mist is mistranslated through too many miscegenations to count: we no longer think in combinations of mountain and air, remember in bonescript cracks the goddess or excess, breathe and the red feather falls.

The past crosses the Sam Chun River at the point where freshwater and sea collide, saltmarsh makes new skin, lips parch, the city imagined beyond reedbed the only horizon, the new mobility, the new speech salted out from the lips in this final effort.

Nothing is so deep swimming is fear.

There is now, each now new, each bird rising the first and soon lost to a new first, each weed catching your ankles and thread of skin stripped and lost to the swim the first and new. You refuse the seed-metaphor, seek a different planting. Uncle, you are the red bird, are the one black smudge among many (an old poet's claim that water drawn falling must happen in a single brushstroke uninterrupted but in various moments disturbed) I bear relation to you only in untranslatable generation names.

We can recount what was into what is across breakwaters

CRISIS & CRITIQUE /

Recall: I ask you impossibly why tradition burnt in generation books makes of the woman waiting stone on a mountaintop.

Stones do not wait or want nor woman either. What is forgotten also marks such a punctum.

What is we is a future and keens backwards, does not know what you are except the margin of a story

before what decisive break when mist like skin fell over poetry

before a single origin point

Again the marshland calls (the birds call, rising from reedbeds and mangroves)

I wager on the breaks to find the crossing point, desire the point of no return, build life for end times.

WALLBUILDER

The vision brought to a terminus in one of the following ways (check which are applicable and discriminate, find thus a path) darkness

landmass skyscrapers

what horizon exists (its band of light)

such condition that disavows the manysidedness of things

Imagine now (address to the poet) what it may mean to not abuse your wife with dictation so indulge in cataract removal surgery dislodge the cormorant who sits crowing on the rough walls stop fêting old beginnings

With the black shadow gone and the light we return to the saltmarshes dredging (the mobile fisherman sets out to work the assumed land exists below the water) built the wall, ratcheted the dimmerswitch down, sent in red notes a reckoning to the back of the cave you imagine somewhere on the mountain you also imagine but do not see, chew kernels to a pulp, key in observations, return to find bolted onto bedrock an aggression of rise and fall not creature nor symbol giving power through synthesis to the settlement.

We are speaking at crosspurposes (evolutionary requirement) beak bent as wing (each birdflight new) and on skin fine stretchmarks show the transformative care

the transformative care

you have afforded the metaphor scars circuitous

rooftop corrugated iron village brought to a stop by city which flows.

Rivercrossing

469

Q U E

Т

S

S

CREX-CREX

canticulum (anima beata)

The vowels escape or the crossroads.

which is perhaps the point

into flesh, refuses

Plumage, cryptic, rots featherfall.

into nesii, retuses

We forget

the wind-up, the body a kernel and the ghost invisible in the grain, remember of a figure, smell mulch.

Volume 9 Issue 1

C

S

I S

С

Т

Q

U E

An I

grates mobile and hearth.

between hearth

Calluna from pine, asks in pitch except change.

burns, resin spits gold what it is has been missed

Motes airs, smudge out words.

in migrant patterns scatter

a cold hearth, smoor meant for leaving.

Stasis breeds of heart in a room

blackening plumage the stone

Birds nest in chimneys by association stains with night.

STONEGATHERER

What dust there is is never only stone. Imagine: the stone speaks. Prise open the mind. Imagine (again): the stone. Reprise. A is more or less B polytropos.

We cannot be sure what stone is (were never sure of bedrock).

An orange bird migrates, hops from stone to stone seeking dust

Volume 9 Issue 1

C

S

S

&

Т

Q

U

[there was an error
in the original – for dust
read knife [read worm
read false dusting [there was an error in the original – for hop
read in a vowel
a hop[e from stone
to s]tone, a c]row false destiny, d]us[t
a]ston[ishment

finds

beneath one stone, trembling, voicewizened figures

caps

the open mouths with more stone before they can utter

- how

we did not divine such a bird

the 'dark' falls the comedy is over. We are bathed in orange light, colourblind, prating or nightblind (something chokes nightsongs in tonerows)
but no longer static on the screen.

471

C R moss whets Ι S stone I S sea & saltlipped rolls С knife R Т 1 Q Ù Ε Volume 9 Issue 1

The dark tripped and fell from the universe once which was before this action began.

NYCTICORAX-NYCTICORAX

canticulum (anima beata)

Observe the romance of the sprinkling of dust which must be avoided.

The threat display is upright.
the man begins to count,
in-two, the bird, the saltmarshes,
falls apart, smothered
croaks in segments,
and yet is, does not
is essential.

Vision brought to a terminus starting with the oneand the world in apostrophe. The 'man' in 'modern' 'ruins' and what was not annihilate, and thus night is and R I S I S & C R I T I Q U E / Volume 9

C

Volume 9 Issue 1

Serve man sprinkling dust.

Be void.

to have been capstone or cairn of some planetary orbital force flies cutting sky and mending it The bird balances on what we interpret but which now under weight crumbles further. The bird in its wake is our vision ironstained.

(obsolete theory of emendation)

It is the eye which slows sound from happening.

It is the eye

which is party to what the dual is seek

the eyes

(the red bird's beak)

are clouded

GREYRUN

is different now the sound barrier is broken. To send is to stain but in this supercool movement it is only memory that strains and you who forces from fear or knowledge of the liquid crystalline.

Too many ag pain sky will not take grey over ground, let gooselag pain sky with sound and disappear (strange weaving through cloud and cloud alike).

Further down, murmurations attempt the aerial, fail, are read as patternings.

We tread thin ice

as clouds do not wait, do not count. Imagine: the stone. Imagine: the cloud. Fail to draw clouds and with brushcurves on the dull of paper watch grey surround a drying habit.

There is a certain salinity in it all, a certain avoidance of reprisals, the ink haloes of the wager (no-one wears it convincingly anymore and weaving becomes the darning of thin patches in matter).

I dare you. Because there is always a city

on a horizon

the plain

(if it still exists) is a figure, is the sea, development, capital

there are forms of petrol that flame green, orange

the sailor spreads animalskin over the sea

effects a crossingplace,

CRISIS & CRITIQUE /

CRISIS & CRITIQUE /

Volume 9 Issue 1

Reprise, now, the story of the start of the red bird's migration, what it carries with it, hooked on the cross of its bill with muted swifttongued trill even as there is no one sure saying any more. The letter cryptic as plumage bright in the pocket does not snag or chafe, break skin or sing through seams.

It is well known that in the story there can be no fault lines, only travel. Light rests in the ocean your eyes I keen toward.

Curtains immaterial to the moment are thrown open to the solar term marked by the possibility of big snow.

Candles not lit on the night-time table set underneath the curtains in certain finery; none of this is nocturnal, nor whiteout, all wields posed nothing. There is no domestic reflected in windowpanes, the spheres have changed and neither star nor screech owl hurl cries onto the dark.

We walk towards what we know held by clock lag. Slowed, the book tells us we cannot wait for birdsong (Loxia's red is irruptive as its figure). Snow does not fall, the letter still, the world's sky gauze. The bird shines elsewhere, breaks bitter almonds to quench an inarticulate thirst, prevented from calling. There are no colours here, a cessation.

Past the city the ocean pays nightlight's debts in a gold that floats dissembling, neither either nor or; the eye held captive by the band of it between city and sky sends out flares.

These, then, are the lessons we might learn should we see or ask for them, and as for the ocean, the bird, the negation that comes before dawn, one day we will have cause to swim there.

Tonight in this winter on this hill I have walked too many times unhampered by claw or beak shadows sough, fascicles twist, shortening, a summerheady currency of gorse is studied lack and pine no longer smoulders. Winter rain is not cold nor precipitate.

С The hill clouds itself until there is ocean, city, absence of song. Unlearnt even in the dark our eyes see S through it: it has ever been impossible to act surety for language. Τ S The bird gone or never here is long adapted to crack the hard kernel & its beak not one nor two, its unsung rubricate speech a cross-purposed С supercooled lag time. Shared breath in small moments Т condenses crystal and cloud as the split tongue fails Q and touch of tongue's tip to tip calls out U the tentative longheld letter, the breath's concert, these divided minds where I is retongued, remade.

Reprise, now

our lack of single origin point.